

Missouri fiddle master John White is back with a well-rounded batch of tunes new and old. This collection of John's tunes features hoedowns, hornpipes, waltzes, polkas, two-steps, and even a schottische—everything needed to play one of his local dances. John's years in central Missouri may have changed his repertoire, but have not changed his style from the strongly rhythmic northern Missouri fiddle he grew up playing. From the one-room schoolhouse where he played his first dances, to the 1962 Allis-Chalmers dealership opening in Macon, Missouri, to last month's dance in Hallsville, John's fiddling has been keeping toes tapping in Missouri for over 70 years!

A Little Further Down the Road

Thank you to our local sound guru, Sam Griffin, for the loan of audio recording equipment. Thanks to Joel Savoy and the 2017 Festival of American Fiddle Tunes for inviting John to perform (which prompted us to make this record).

Thanks also to Bill Peterson and Missouri Valley Music for hosting John's latest record. For more of John's great fiddling, check out Voyager Records VRCD372, Nine Miles of Dry and Dusty.
